Central MA Up + Comers is a weekly profile of a member of the next generation as they begin making their mark on the Central Massachusetts workforce and community. Join us every Thursday for a look at the careers and lifestyles of the local digital generation.

SW: We are introducing some of the younger generation who is starting to or is making their mark on the Central MA community. What career have you chosen to move forward in?

LC: I'm an estate planning/elder law attorney and a founding partner of Estate Preservation Law Offices (EPLA), a boutique estate planning and asset protection law firm based out of Worcester.

SW: What is the best thing about your job?

LC: The variety in my daily challenges: every day brings unique circumstances that test my intellectual and creative abilities.

SW: Can you describe a typical day in your life?

LC: My weekdays begin early—usually before 5AM. After spending a few minutes with my husband before his work day, I hustle to walk the dogs, review my daily calendar, answer a few emails and get into the office by or before 7:30. Once in the office, my schedule typically contains an assortment of client meetings and phone conferences, interoffice conferences throughout the day with my staff and partner, and perhaps a business lunch. In between meetings I return emails and phone calls, work on miscellaneous projects/documents, and review professional forums to track developments in the law. Of course, no day is complete without sharing a few laughs with my coworkers—we are firm believers that appreciating the humor in life keeps us fresh and upbeat for our clients. The last item of the business day is often a board or committee meeting, as I serve on several nonprofit boards. After dinner with my husband, I catch up on emails and miscellaneous projects from the day. Suffice it to say, running a law practice is really more of a lifestyle than a job!

SW: What is your dream job?

LC: A position where I am in control of my schedule and workload, intellectually and creatively stimulated, surrounded by a dynamic and talented team, and able to help people—which, as it turns out, describes my current job!

SW: What is your favorite piece of technology?

LC: My iPhone—it doesn't leave my side except when I'm meeting with a client.

SW: What is on your iTunes?

LC: Dido, Imagine Dragons, Alicia Keys, Moby, Pete Dinklage, Adele, Paul Simon, Rolling Stones

SW: What is your favorite social networking site? Why?

LC: I have been slow to enter the social network scene, probably because of the demands on my time in the business realm. However, my firm has a blog, EPLA: In Touch, which we use to relay important changes in the law. It's exciting to have such an instantaneous and widespread mode of communication with our clients and professional contacts.

SW: What do you do away from your career?

Linda Cammuso, founding partner of Estate Preservation Law Offices.
